Nocturne Pyongyang 1, 2016, silk screen over photo
33.2 x 26.3cm

Monteith's Nocturne silk screen prints reference postcards in scale and recede almost to darkness, requiring a close and slow inspection. The scale of these works speak to the ubiquity of a travel experience, however complicated due to the very nature of traveling to North Korea. The offset rectangular floods of indigo and purple silk screened over each image act as formal veiling devices, darkening each image while alluding to the manufactured nature of the concentrated spectacle in evoking a mood and a narrative beyond what can be seen.

Born in Toronto, Canada John Monteith's work has been exhibited the Tate Modern, London, X Initiative, New York, The New York Art Book Fair at PS 1 and O'Born Contemporary, Toronto, among other venues. His work is featured in a number of private and corporate collections
